Monadnock Madness Returns for Seventh Year

Adventurers invited to explore Georgia's geological gems
Tickets on sale January 22nd

STONECREST, Ga. – Are you ready to rock? This March, get out and explore Georgia's granite giants – Arabia Mountain, Panola Mountain and Stone Mountain – during the annual Monadnock Madness. Come celebrate these three major Atlanta-area monadnocks through hikes, workshops, classes and fitness throughout the month. That includes the ever-popular Triple Hike Challenge, in which hikers summit all three granite mountains in a single day. A celebration of nature, wildlife and some darn big rocks, Monadnock Madness will change how you see Atlanta's wild places. Registration for triple hikes, photography workshop and mountaintop yoga opens on Jan. 22nd.

Now in its seventh year, the month-long outdoor extravaganza gives participants an opportunity to see rare, red diamorpha – also called elf orpine – with white blooms, vibrant vernal pools and out-of-this-world landscapes. Hikers can also join in on a variety of activities including photography workshops, mountaintop yoga, various guided hikes and other special programs at all three sites. “This is a great way to roll into spring,” said Mera Cardenas, Executive Director of the Arabia Alliance. “These are ecosystems not found anywhere else in the country, right here in Atlanta’s backyard.”

All hikers will earn a commemorative souvenir after completing the Triple Hike Challenge. If you are interested in completing the challenge at your own pace, each park offers visitors the option to “hike as you like,” a self-guided tour of the three monadnocks. Pick up a passport at one of the parks or online at monadnockmadness.com during the month of March.

“My favorite part of Monadnock Madness was getting to experience the parts of Panola Mountain available only on the guided hike. The views are refreshing and breathtaking. The trees and plants are just starting to wake up for spring and lovely to see. Panola is pristine and such a wonderful treat to explore,” said past participant Cindy Hays. “I also enjoyed the other two monadnocks, Arabia and Panola Mountains, and the camaraderie with the other hikers.”
